THE subject of slavery in Hongkong is one about which so much has at various times been said that it might have been thought difficult to add anything fresh to the discussion. The Colony is, however, indebted to his Lordship the Chief Justice for the very. lucid statement he made yesterday on the law of the Colony with regard to this sub ject. Sir John Smale on various occasions uttered fulminations against-slavery. and it certainly cannot be charged against his Lordship that he quirotically charged at a windwill in so doing, for the evil which he denounced unfortunately did and does exist. Nor was his action in the matter unproductive of good, for he cited attention in regard to a subject which ought certainly not to be lost eight of. The good he did, however, was not unmixed with evil, for, while he did little in the way of suggesting a practical remedy for the evil, his atterances gave vise to a Lake impression that slavery was in some way officially countonanced or allowed. is true he distinctly stated slavery was wholly illegal here, as elsewhere in the British dominjons, but still the effect of his remarks was to give an dea that the law was some way faulty, and also to throw blame on officials to whom no blame proporly attached. This is amply shown by what has been said on the subject at various times and in various places, in England. It would, we think be difficult to suggest any amendment of the law with regard to slavery or the illegal detention of persons, partipularly women indechildren, in Hongkong, The only difficulty is the detection of the

it as to what their nights are. In addition legalised slavery impossible there are in at 11 o'clock on Puesday night

THE RETURN OF THE SAILOR

The sons of the Prince of Wales have arrived home from their two years' sea craise. The Bachants, with which signals were exchanged off St. Alban's Head. After the Royal parentshad met their sons on board the Bacchante'. leave was given for the two midshipmen to com plete their journey in the Royal vacht Osborne where they found their sisters and a number of friends. On landing at Cowes the Prince and Princess and family drove to Osborne, where the Queen welcomed her grandsons on their return The protracted cruise which has thus happily terminated may be said in round numbers to have proceeded along the coast of Spain, across the the coast of South America to the Falkland Islands. Here the nows of the Transvasl War rewhed the squadron, and necessitated an alteration in the original programme. The ships went coolie was called who said he saw the affair. under the leadership of Nyak Hassan and others, given to ministers plenipotentiary of foreign direct to the Cape, and thence scross the South Pacific to Australia, and northward to Japan and China. Leaving Hongkong the Bacchants sailed through the sea of China and the Straits of Malacca to Ceylon and the Care, and thence scress the Indian Ocean to Aden, and through the Red Sea and the Suez Capel to the Mediter .
